

We hold the position for you!

A few weeks ago, we set the right course with suitable prevention measures so that the corona virus does not negatively affect our performance in day-to-day business and, above all, our employees stay healthy.

We have fully equipped all of the administrative workstations for the home office and so over 50 percent of our administrative staff work from home without you, our customer, noticing.

We continue to produce at both locations without restrictions and since we counteract the risk of infection in an exemplary manner, we are sure that it will stay that way. In order to ensure that our production does not come to a standstill due to a lack of raw material, we have massively increased our safety stocks. This means we can produce for two months, even if the replenishment is completely eliminated.

For two weeks now, our production at both locations has been divided into two shifts and staggered break times to reduce contact between our employees to a minimum. Our employees are all sensitized to the behavior with which they can best protect their colleagues and themselves. Everyone has been told how important it is that they apply this behavior to their private lives for the time being. So far, these measures have contributed to the fact that we have no known cases of infection.

We also strive to protect our employees and customers outside of our premises. That is why we are currently refraining from visits to our as well as your company. However, we are still available for you as usual.

We are confident that together we will all survive the crisis and the economic turmoil expected from it and we look forward to the return to normal soon.

We hope you and your loved ones will stay healthy!

With kind regards

Frank Sangel
